Proceedings of the Government of His Highness the Maharaja of Mysore.

No. R 5505-15 / CR. 434-12-1 Dated Bangalore 23rd April 1913.

It has been brought to the notice of Government that temporary huts or sheds for dwelling and other purposes are often erected in close proximity to Railway Stations during outbreaks of --- plague or other epidemic diseases and that these sheds constitute a danger to the safety of the Station staff as well as of the travelling public. Government consider that Deputy Commissioners who have the power to permit the erection of such sheds or huts on agricultural or and Government land, should take special precautions to prevent any sheds being erected near a Railway Station so as to give any occasion for the spread of plague to the Railway premises. As far as possible, no such sheds or huts should be erected within two furlongs of a Railway Station. Sheds erected on private land which are found to be in any way likely to be a source of danger to the Railway Authorities, should be removed on the requisition of the Railway Authorities to a safe distance in exercise of the powers vested in Deputy Commissioners under Rule 9 of the Rules under the Epidemic Diseases Regulation of 1897.
